Self-Study versus Live Instruction

The CFA exam requires a significant commitment of your valuable time and your scarce financial resources. So the first decision you have to make (after you decide to sign up for Level I and use the services of an exam prep provider) is how you are going to make it through 300 hours of study over a period of 6 to 9 months and give yourself the best chance of success. That means deciding whether you are going to attend a live or online class, or go it alone, so to speak.
